Seniors Crushed By Juniors

By: Glenda Gaitan

Spirit week was here with the excitement of class night, pep rally and homecoming.

Each class had the opportunity to show their class colors on Thursday during the day and at night during class night.

On Thursday at 7:00pm the gym was packed with students wearing blue, black, red, green and white. Many students and school staff attended class night to represent their class and witness who would be victorious at "the battle of the classes." Students seem pretty excited, the atmosphere couldn't be better.

Seniors started winning and they actually won most of the games but it was the judges who had the last word. And at the end they decide that the winners of the night were class of 2009. Class of 2011 ended up in fourth place while class of 2010 in third. Seniors had to console themselves with second place.

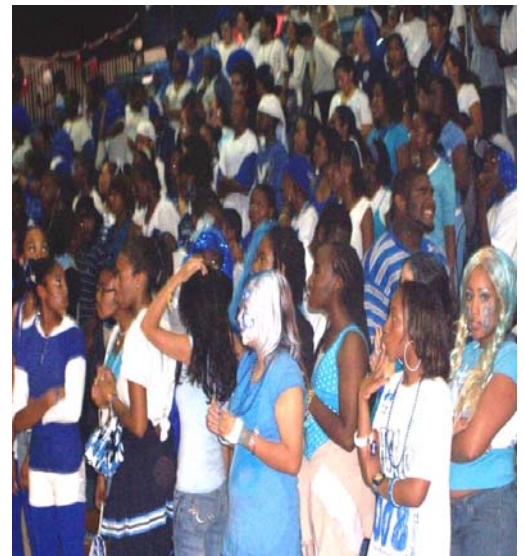

Rumors are spreading around that the judges took some points off the seniors because they thought that seniors didn't give a good example to their underclassmates when they all turn their back to the rest and act like if they were reading a newspaper, while the other classes were singing their class song. But the true thing is that they didn't. "The seniors did win most of the games but in the ones they lost they came in last place and those points add up. We grade it the classes based on the guidelines that the Student Government Association gave us, the Juniors did lost some of the games but in those games they lost they didn't came in last place so when the time came to calculate the total points the Juniors won," Stated Ms. Sampson who was head of the judges at class night.

It did hurt for seniors since this is their last year, but second place is not that bad at all, plus we have to admit that class night was very excited, full of energy, and we all had a great time. "It was fun, but 08 should have won, the judges shouldn't have taken points off the seniors because we did something cool, new and unexpected. I think that more students should have participated since the school has a big student body," said Lenny Alvarez, a senior who seems upset but satisfied.

Juniors were certain that they were going to win since the beginning. "It was awesome, 2009 is the best, seniors deserved to lose but it was fun," said Ismael Balderas Wong. On the other hand freshmen knew that they didn't extend a chance to win versus such big opponents. Hal Erickson said, "I feel that we were too small to win any contest, I think that the seniors should have won but overall it was fun." The sophomores also demonstrated that "10" doesn't play around when it comes to see who the best is, even though they got 3rd place they were satisfied with the results.

Class night was definitely fun, most of the students participated but still there were a few students that felt that class color day and class night were unimportant events such as sophomore Inn Smith, "class of 10 stinks, I don't really care that class of 09 won, and I also didn't think that class of 08 deserve to win."

Students all agree that class night was enjoyable and of course we can't wait until next year to do it all over again.....all except the class of 2008 🤔. Class night once again prove to be lively and entertaining.
