Pause for a 'Meta-Moment!'

Given the upheavals and disruptions of the last 18 months, have you been easily triggered or felt overwhelmed by big emotions? Emotional regulation, stress management, and self care are key components of self-management, one of the five core competencies of social-emotional learning.

As a healthy emotional regulation strategy, PGCPS School Psychologist Dr. Jacquelyn Gordon suggests taking a ‘Meta-Moment’ – a tactical ‘pause’ which allows us time to intentionally choose how to respond when triggered. The “Meta-Moment” requires you to 1) notice the shift in your body or thinking following a trigger 2) stop or pause and take a deep breath 3) imagine your ‘best self’ by thinking of how you want to be seen or experienced by others and 4) select a healthy response to take a more positive perspective of the situation.
